Dedication

This thesis is dedicated to the memory of my parents, Mary and Thomas McHugh, born into a farming community in Ballintubber Co. Mayo a century ago. Their significant sacrifices in challenging times enabled me to acquire the roots to grow and the wings to fly - to a fulfilling career as an educator.

Acknowledgements

I thank the members of my family for their continuing love, support and inspiration. In particular I thank my wife and partner in all endeavours, Bernadette, for her unconditional love and support always. Our children Gearóid, Ann and Joseph, our daughter-in-law, Nicola and our granddaughter Saoirse give me reasons to be fulfilled every day.

I thank the management committee of Dublin West Education Centre for their encouragement and for enabling me to have my documents typed. I am truly grateful to Doireann Quinn who typed the thesis and most of the interview scripts and to Linda Caulwell who typed the remainder of the interview scripts.

To the twelve principals who afforded me every courtesy and the gift of their time, experience and wisdom as I interviewed them, I am in your debt; your words have given me further insights into a noble profession.

My gratitude is due also to Dr. Martin Brown for his encouragement and assistance and to the countless principals and teachers who tell me their stories every day.

I thank Professor Peter Ribbins for the idea, for encouraging me to develop the idea, for his insights in the area of leadership in education and for his most professional approach.

Finally I thank most sincerely my thesis supervisor, Professor Gerry McNamara, his wisdom and expertise have been most helpful, his encouragement and his disposition have been motivating, his common sense has been a treasure.

ABSTRACT

TITLE: The Leadership Careers of Selected Primary School Principals in Ireland: a qualitative investigation of the formation of the principal and what inspires and sustains the principal in his/her leadership role

AUTHOR: Gerard McHugh

This thesis explored the leadership role of the Primary School Principal in Ireland. It examined the making of a principal (formation), becoming a principal (accession) and being a principal (incumbency). It painted a portrait of accession to principalship and investigated how participating principals perceive the role of principal early in the second decade of 21st century and moreover what inspires and sustains them in their work

A review of literature included works on leadership, leadership in education, career history approaches and the history of the Primary School Principal in Ireland. Twelve principals were interviewed for a period of between one and half and two and a half hours each.

The study was located within a phenomenological paradigm using a qualitative methodology. The research tool used was the face to face semi- structured interview combined with a life story and career history approach to studying school leaders.

The thesis found that Irish Primary Principals are very highly motivated, they believe they have high levels of autonomy in many areas of their work and that they are accountable to many stakeholders. Further findings are described under five themes; Values/Moral Purpose/Interests of Children; Empowerment; Frustrations; Passion and Pride and Emerging Landscapes. While principals are extremely positive about their role they acknowledge many significant frustrations accompanying the role in a time of uncertainty. A number of recommendations were made which may be of interest to principals, policy makers and researchers.
